

My husband and I listen to a national Christian radio station, K-Love. This station broadcasts a positive message and provides an indispensable service to the community. If the LPFM change is made, and stations are allowed to take over the broadcast frequencies of stations like K-Love, what is to protect the rights of all stations? Where will we draw the line?

My husband travels frequently to larger markets than San Antonio and even though their airwaves are more "occupied", there are still available frequencies for LPFM stations without jeopardizing the existence of stations like K-Love.

I believe in freedom of speech and that all individuals have the privilege of following their dreams whatever they may be but at what cost to others? Would it be acceptable for your neighbor to park on your driveway because he's working on his? Of course not. Would it be acceptable if, while eating out, the person at the table next to you suddenly took your dinner plate that had just arrived just because his hadn't arrived and he was hungry? Absolutely not. So why should we legalize the take over of the frequency of one station by another?

Thank you for your time and considerations,
Catherine Lichtenberger